14 IN POLICE COURT

Regular Routine Business Confronts The City Council In Regular October Meeting.

A financial report of the city, given last night by Mayor W. O. Garrett, at the regular council meeting, showed that the treasury is in better condition than at the same time last year. The three main funds, water, general and street, show bigger balances than at the close of business, September, 1924, Mayor Garrett said this morning. There was a balance of $56,035.49 in the treasury last night, according to the report, out of which the September bills are to be paid.

Regular routine business came up before the council last night, and after allowing bills and hearing reports, adjourned until Monday for the final adoption of a paving ordinance awarding contract for three blocks on South Walnut to the Cook & O'Brien Co..

The balances in the different funds, as shown by the Mayor's report:

Of this number 280 were in the juvenile section, 948 in the general division and eighty-nine magazines, an average of fifty-two a day. There were thirty-nine readers cards issued, 1,156 used the reading rooms during the month, an average of thirty-nine per day. Collections totaled $16.11.

From the wash rack $2.25 was collected and $14.15 from the city scales, according to Claud Stults.

ALL NATIONS NEED CHRIST

BETTER WORLD DEPENDS UPON CHRISTIANITY.

NEED ORGANIZATION

Forces For Right Must Unite, World Service Officers Tells Methodist Ministers at Tarkio.

Tarkio, Mo., Oct. 2.—"No theory of civilization that omits or neglects Christ's fundamental laws of human organization and relationship can succeed in producing the highest type of individual and social realization," Dr. Orrin W. Auman, Chicago, treasurer of the World Service Commission of the Methodist Episcopal Church, told the ministers and laity of the Missouri Annual Conference in session here today.

"If the world is ever to achieve a satisfactory state of human experience, we believe that it will be done only when the principles set forth in the teachings of Jesus Christ become universally operative.

"It is conceivable that the fulfillment of Christ's teachings in human life might be achieved without the organization of the Christian Church to propagate them, but it does not seem probable that such result could be accomplished without some organization of human purpose and energies concentrated upon its accomplishment. Therefore, the Church must take more and more seriously the commission as received from its founder to bring in the Kingdom of God, a consummation which is unconsciously awaited and sought for by a distressed and sometime hopeless world.

"The World Service organization of the Methodist Episcopal Church is designed to concentrate upon this purpose of Christianizing civilization and building the Kingdom of God. The Church is operating through six World Service agencies known as: The Board of Foreign Missions, the Board of Home Missions and Church Extension.

"A great deal of what is being done on the foreign field is being done in close co-operation, and in many instances, in complete union with similar agencies of other denominations. This is particularly true in lines of medical and educational service.

Explains Council Work.

"In the year 1925, the work of cultivation is largely given up to organizing and developing the local churches throughout the connection for the raising of finances. The asking of the several boards under World Service, amount to a little over eighteen and one-half million dollars a year. To secure this, each local church is expected to have an organization known as the World Service Council. Grouping of churches by districts are organized under District Councils and still larger groups are registered as Annual Conferences and Episcopal Area Councils.

"The financial askings, while apparently large in bulk sum, average less than two cents per capita per day of the Methodist Episcopal Church membership.

"In addition to the financial side of this movement, there is what is still more important, the prophetic element, mainly a moral and spiritual message to the present age, similar to that which we recognize in the great prophets of the Old Testament, such as Isaiah, Amos and Micah, men who spoke vigorously to their times from the standpoint of social life and national movements.

Christianity Means Action.

"A single illustration will suffice that of the present uprising in China

LARGE CROWD AT FESTIVAL

CLEARING SKIES BRIGHTENS TODAY'S PROGRAM.

WILL END TOMORROW

Cliff Curran To Leave This Afternoon For Texas—Tonight Last Appearance Of Flying Floyds.

Clearing skies brightened today's program of the third annual Fall Festival, given under the auspices of the Maryville Chamber of Commerce.

Because of an engagement in Texas next week, Cliff Curran, the performer on the pole near the Elks Club building, will leave Maryville this afternoon. His act was given early this afternoon.

Tonight will be the last appearance of the Flying Floyds as they also have an engagement next week. Their act, which is generally popular with the festival crowds, is given just south of the Barmann Auto Co.

Heard Shots and Shouts of Woman

Witness Testified in Garvey Case in K. C. He Heard Woman in Room of Lumber Man.

Kansas City, Oct. 2.—Nine shots and the screams of a woman, "he has shot his father; why did he do it?" were heard by John H. Hatcher of the Kirby Lumber Co., across the hall from the office of James W. Garvey, retired lumber man for whose murder Roy B. Garvey is on trial.

This was Hatcher's testimony at the morning session of the trial today. Hatcher was the first witness. The name of a woman in the senior Garvey's office has been frequently mentioned as a possible motive for the shooting.

That a letter written by Garvey the night before his death and read to W. A. Wilson would be the state's main instrument in seeking to prove a motive was indicated in the opening statement of Forrest W. Hanna, Jackson County prosecutor. Roy Garvey learned of the letter and tried to find out its contents from Wilson the morning his father was shot. The letter was addressed to Bennett Garvey, brother of Roy, then living in Oklahoma.

Hatcher is expected to continue on the stand during the afternoon session.

Shows Lansdowne Asked for Change

Correspondence Is Read Into Records of Naval Inquiry—Recommended Reduced Number of Valves.

Lakehurst, N. J., Oct. 2.—Correspondence indicating that Commander Zachary Lansdowne of the ill-fated Shenandoah was responsible for the reduction of gas valves in the dirigible was read into the records of the naval investigating board today.

Capt. Antone Heinen, German dirigible expert, had given his opinion that the wreck of the dirigible in Ohio with the loss of thirteen lives was due to the reduced number of valves.

Lieut.-Com. C. E. Rosendahl, ranking surviving officer of the Shenandoah, read the correspondence that passed between Commander Lansdowne and Captain E. S. Land of the naval construction corps at Washington. The letters showed that Commander Lansdowne recommended the removal of eight valves and he considered the small number "perfectly safe in peace times."

Denies Flight Is Work of Amateurs

In Testimony Commander John Rodgers Declares Men Aboard PN-9 No. 1 All Experienced Flyers.

Washington, Oct. 2.—Commander Rodgers today hotly denied before the President's air board that the unsuccessful flight of the PN-9 No. 1 to Honolulu was the work of "bungling amateurs," as charged by Col. William Mitchell. The men, including himself, were all qualified aeronautic experts, Rodgers said.

Rodgers declared he was unalterably opposed to a unified air service as proposed by Mitchell, but he did recommend a separate corps within the navy department.

MORE BODIES FOUND IN SUB

TWO ARE RECOVERED BY DIVERS IN RESCUE TODAY.

WORK WILL CARRY ON

Secretary Wilbur Orders Commander At Naval Base To Continue Operations Off Block Island.

New London, Conn., Oct. 2.—The sea surrendered two more bodies from the vitals of the S-51 today.

Risking their lives to do so, divers brought forth from the engine room the bodies of Walter Edward Lawton, electrician mate, first class, and Brady D. Lindsey, engineer, second class.

Admiral Christe sent a message to the submarine base, which read:

"Divers entered engine room through hatch and found motor room door open. Plan to burn small exploring hole to determine whether it is flooded or not. Recommend release of Monarch and Century as I can forsee no possible use of them in rescue operations. A body cast ashore at Stoning, thought to have been a petty officer, was not a member of the crew of the S-51 navy officers later discovered."

The discovery of the open door leading to the motor room spelled the end of the attempt to save the S-51 crew, officers admitted.

"They are all dead in there," declared Lieut.-Commander Flanigan, sadly. "It is the end."

There was a question whether the divers would attempt to enter the motor room to search for bodies as the hazard of the divers in crossing the threshold in their cumbersome outfits was regarded as great.

"We have had enough deaths," remarked Admiral Christe, obviously affected by the definite news that all hope was gone.

However, each of the eight divers volunteered to go down into the death trap to retrieve the victims when word of the open door of the motor room reached the naval base all work was stopped. Gob and officer alike doffed their caps and bowed their heads as the bugler blew taps.

Washington, Oct. 2.—Secretary Wilbur today ordered Admiral Christe to continue rescue operations at the scene of the sinking of the S-51.

Operations must be carried on, Wilbur said, until it is determined that no one is alive in any of the compartments of the submarine.

When it is determined that no one is alive on the vessel, Christe is directed to continue his work in removing the bodies of the dead men. He is instructed to remove all of the unnecessary equipment.

New London, Conn., Oct. 2.—The sea gave up another of the dead of the sunken S-51 when the body of the chief petty officer was washed ashore at Kensons warf, fifteen miles from here.

Important Point Is Taken by Spanish

Former Stronghold of Riffian Rebel Leader Is Captured And Occupied, According To Dispatches.

London, Oct. 2.—Spanish troops occupied Ajdir, the former stronghold of Abd-el-Krim, at 11:30 o'clock this morning, according to a dispatch from Madrid this afternoon. The occupation of Ajdir is the greatest blow that has been directed at the Riffs to date.

For a long time Ajdir has been considered almost impregnable. It was there that Abd-el-Krim maintained his general headquarters.

DARK CLOUDS FOLLOW TRUCE

BUT AMERICANS BELIEVE PARLEY WILL BE RESUMED.

FRENCH ARE DOUBTING

Paris Officials Cannot Understand How Caillaux Intends To Raise Revenue For American Payments.

Washington, Oct. 2.—Failure was written largely today across the record of the Franco-American debt negotiations.

How permanent this failure is to be will be determined sometime within the next five years. During the breathing spell, the American government has allowed France to reconsider her refusal to take up her four-billion-dollar war-debt on terms akin to those that the seven other debtor nations have found acceptable.

While the manner in which the tempestuous week of negotiations was ended here was not conducive to undue optimism, administration officials generally feel confident today that the negotiations will be resumed before the expiration of the five-year period.

Meanwhile, it is assured that no encouragement will be given American bankers to extend any new loans to France which she now needs so badly to consolidate her internal debt and bring order out of the chaos into which an unbalanced budget and a ragged taxation system has brought her national finances.

In marked contrast to the buoyant manner in which he arrived in Washington predicting a settlement within a week, M. Caillaux departed this morning for New York. He will sail for France tonight. No ceremonies mark his going.

Paris, Oct. 2.—A pall of gloom hung over official circles today as the result of the Franco-American debt negotiations had been thoroughly studied.

It was characterized in financial circles here as an "American demand for tribute." It was pointed out that the forty-million-dollar annual payments will not reduce the French debt to American and therefore the French legislature is not likely to approve it.

Another question that worries Paris is where and how M. Caillaux intends to raise the forty million dollars annually for the payments to America. The closer the temporary settlement is studied, the thicker the gloom becomes.

Rome, Oct. 2.—Italy is unruffled by the failure of the Franco-American debt negotiations.

The Italian debt mission to the United States will sail as planned on October 20 with Count Volpi, finance minister, heading the mission, it was announced.

Jonesburg Journal Suspends Publication

Jonesburg, Mo., Oct. 2.—After the destructive fire here though the fire is not given as the cause, the Jonesburg Journal published for forty-six years, has suspended. Dr. J. L. Jones, editor gives "lack of support from the community" as the reason for its discontinuance.

Man's Body Taken From Missouri River

Officers Believe Man Is Murdered and Thrown Into Waters—Had Been in Several Days.

Kansas City, Oct. 2.—The body of an unidentified man was taken from the Missouri river this morning by a truck gardener. The body had been in the river several days, according to the coroner.

Cuts and bruises on the man's body indicated he may have been killed and thrown into the river.

The Weather

Somewhat unsettled tonight and Saturday, possibly showers; not much change in temperature.

FINGERPRINTS OF ALL

New York's police commissioner is the latest to advocate the fingerprinting of everybody. He is particularly concerned with the uses police departments could make of such a system of identification. Other advocates of the plan recommend it for other reasons, such as the identification of the "lost and found." And yet in spite of all the national benefits the fingerprinters claim for their system there is as much chance of a national catalogue of finger marks as there is of the abolition by constitutional amendment of the drinking of strong tea.

The most effective objection to the plan rests in the fact, fingerprinting has so long been associated by everybody with the discovery and identification of criminals that subjection to the harmless process is held disgraceful and something to be resented and resisted. Even the courts sustain this absurdity of the imagination by deciding every now and then that fingerprinting must follow conviction, not precede it, and that it is not justified by suspicion, no matter how strong.

The horror with which the average citizen holds the thought of being fingerprinted was vividly portrayed several years ago when an actress, who had been given a prison sentence for recklessly driving her automobile, accepted her disturbing position with nonchalance until she was taken into the fingerprinting bureau when she collapsed on the mere thought of submitting to the painless process.

It is doubtful if any great good would come from recording the fingerprints of each new babe and immigrant but if the arguments in favor of such an order exceed in number the arguments against it, human prejudices and illusions make impossible the carrying out of the plan.

One of the first things a boy learns nowdays is to shift gears for himself.

The report comes out that "Kansas corn is safe now." We doubt it. We don't believe Kansas "corn" is any safer than Missouri "corn" and that is about as safe as dynamite.

It takes a lot of ingenuity and still more money to make a modern prize fighter fight. Jack Dempsey, who fought about two years ago, and Harry Wills will fight a year from now, if nothing happens during the twelve months ahead.

Colonel Mitchell may be radical but if Congress and the country will pay attention to his testimony, it will learn something. There is no institution on earth that needs a clearing out of red tape and mossbackism more than our army and navy.

Laws ought to be made to protect the rights of defendants but they should also be made to protect the rights of the public and of the large majority of law abiding citizens. Frequent court decisions based on far fetched technicalities, when there is no question of the guilt of a defendant nor of the fairness of his trial, would lead one to think that the State has no rights in criminal cases.

Some people are annoyed to have their names on the income tax lists but think how much worse it would be if they were not there. The administration of the income tax laws in a country as big as the United States and with so many business complications is difficult and manifestly imperfect but, after all, in theory it is the fairest tax imposed. It taxes nothing but profits or actual income. If a man has no income, he does not have to pay anything, but if he has an income above the legal exemptions, he is supposed to pay in proportion as he has prospered. The man who is entitled to pay ought to be not only glad but proud of it.

STEWART'S WASHINGTON LETTER

By Charles P. Stewart
NEA Service Writer.

By Charles P. Stewart
NEA Service Writer

Washington—About one-fourth of all the country's children fail in their first year in school.

This is far too large a proportion. The effect on a child's mind of failure, on the very threshold of life, is deplorable.

Naturally he loses confidence in himself. As long as he lives he is likely to suffer from the failure complex.

The figures and reasoning are those of the District of Columbia federation of the national Parent-Teachers' Association. The federation has started a movement, which it plans to make country-wide, toward preventing so many first-year-in-school failures, for it maintains that they are easily preventable in the great majority of cases.

There must be some reason, the federation argued, why so many more children fail in their first than in any subsequent school year.

The federation undertook to discover this reason. It dismissed the idea that the first year's studies are relatively too difficult, generally speaking.

It made due allowance for physical deficiencies, but after all, this allowance has to be made for older children, too, throughout the entire school period.

Finally the federation reached the conclusion that the trouble lies in the entrance of a great many children, perhaps most of them, into school without mental preparation for a school's discipline or any understanding of education's purposes.

The federation sees also the necessity for some preliminary physical training, to adapt the child to a change in habits and surroundings.

Quartette—Virginia Wilson, Mary McGinness, Iola Hollensbe, and Mabel Mann.

Life of Frances E. Willard—Verna Pistole.

A talk was then given by Superintendent Geyer.

Monday, October 5, the program will be in charge of the Senior class.

M. E. CHURCH

The pastor, E. W. Croy, is attending the meeting of the Missouri Conference at Tarkio, this week.

On account of his absence there will be no preaching next Sunday.

Sunday School as usual, at 10 a. m.

CHRISTIAN CHURCH.

The services of last Sunday, though not largely attended because of the bad roads, were well enjoyed. The solo in the morning by Sanford Jones and the girls' sextette at night added much to the services. We are always anxious to have special musical numbers.

Services for next Sunday as follows: Bible School, 10 a. m.; preaching, 11. Subject, "Three Classes of Hearers."

Night service, 8 o'clock. This will probably be an illustrated sermon entitled, "The Love of God." We have ordered some fine colored stereopticon slides for this service, but at this writing they have not arrived, but they will likely be here in time. Definite announcement will be made Sunday morning.

PLEASANT HILL ITEMS.

Pleasant Hill has closed one month of school with an enrollment of thirteen, seven boys and six girls. All doing fine.

We are proud of the new improvements made this year. The school house has been papered; a new set of world maps, flag pole, the name placed on outside of building; three new swings; and are still planning for more improvements the coming year.

The pupils and teacher are planning for a weiner roast Friday evening. Everybody come, bring your weiners, buns and enjoy a good time.

A short dramatization program will be given by the pupils, and music furnished by the district.

The agriculture people are studying fruits; grafting, pruning, budding, etc.

A few experiments are going to be made to observe the results.

The little first graders are making a "picture show" of Little Red Riding Hood, in story hour.

We have three freshmen in high school at State Teachers College and one freshman in College. One sophomore in high school at Quitman.

Their names are Roberta Willhoyte, Eldora Nicholas, Velma White; freshmen in high school, Leland Nicholas, sophomore in Quitman, and Maxine Nicholas, freshman in College.

The farmers are all busy cutting fodder, and getting the ground ready for the planting of wheat.

Bingbampton, N. Y.—Fred G. Beale, the police think, burned a stolen corpse under circumstances calculated to make folks believe it was his, so he could get away with his stenographer unchased.

Nw York—"Why didn't you seek other honest work?" Judge Cohn asked Joe Barra, 20, who had lost a profitable job laying bricks and turned burglar. "I'll be darned if I'd work for less than $77 a week," said the crook and they took him away to Elmira reformatory where he will work for nothing.

Fastest Ship to Be Launched Tomorrow

U. S. Lexington, New Airplane Carrier, Is Longest And Swiftest In American Navy.

Boston, Oct. 2. (United Press).—The U. S. Lexington, swiftest and greatest of airplane carriers, will be launched tomorrow noon at the Fore River Plant of the Bethelhem Shipbuilding Corporation in Quincy, Mass.

Even the queen ships of the United States Navy, the group of electrically driven fighting vessels that includes the Maryland and West Virginia, most powerful battleships in the world, will be excelled in power, speed and length by the Lexington which is a sister ship to the Saratoga, launched this spring at Camden, N. J.

Both the Lexington and the Saratoga were originally designed to be battle cruisers—and as such would have been by far the mightiest fighting craft afloat—but under the terms of the Washington Treaty they were made over into airplane carriers while partly built.

The Navy at present has but one airplane carrier, the U. S. S. Langley, rebuilt from the Old Collier, Jupiter.

The Lexington will be literally a floating airplane field. As a naval vessel, it will class with the "Saratoga" as the longest in the world.

Its power plant will be capable of developing the tremendous force of 180,000 horsepower. This is greater than the combined rated output of the six electric driven capital ships now in commission, viz., New Mexico, California, Maryland, Colorado and West Virginia.

The speed of the Lexington will be more than 33 knots, or 12.6 knots more than the speed of the Maryland. Its length is 874 feet and its beam is 105 feet. The Maryland is 624 feet long at the water line, with a beam of 97 feet. The length of the Langley is 520 feet and her beam is 65 feet.

The propulsion apparatus will consist of four 35,200 kilowatt turbine generator sets, supplying current to eight powerful electric motors. The turbine generators will be operated by steam from sixteen oil-fired boilers.

The motors will be connected in pairs to each of the four propeller shafts. The energy which will be delivered to each shaft by the motors will be 45,000 horsepower, or a total on all four shafts, of 180,000 horsepower. Upon the impulse of this immense force, the propeller blades will revolve 317 times a minute.

The Lexington will exemplify the last word in radio equipment. Like the Langley, it will give particular attention to radio operations.

It will have ample space below decks to store flying machines, as well as elevators and cranes with which to hoist them up from below, preparatory to hopping off from the flying deck.

No naval vessel, except the Langley first of the ships of this type, and the Saratoga, now building look at all the way the Lexington will appear. Because of the minimum deck apparatus, it will seem unusually low in the water. The immense sweep of its great flying decks will be broken only by a massive combination funnel enclosure, set off at one side of the hull.

The deck will be so immense and so unobstructed that it will resemble a small-sized marine drill ground.

Five Thousand Feet From Death

Personal Narratives of Survivors of the Wrecked Dirigible Shenandoah, Written for the Democrat-Forum and Tribune.

NO. 2.

BY S. C. QUERNHEIM
Aviation Machinist's Mate First-Class.

I am alive. I state that simply as a fact. I don't marvel at it. I just accept it—as one must accept anything he can't understand.

Twenty-eight men survived the crash of the Shenandoah. Thirteen men died. I am one of the twenty-eight. Why or how? What matter? I just am. And I am grateful and glad for myself, sorry for the unhappy thirteen.

Right after the ship cracked, I remember thinking, "Well, maybe I have a chance—maybe I haven't." And I started out to try to add to my chance, but always with the thought, that I either had it or hadn't it, and no matter what I did, could alter that fact.

I was asleep when things began to happen. I had just come off duty—I was detailed to one of the engines—and had gone to bed about twenty minutes before the first erratic motion of the ship that told that something was wrong.

Had Had Engine Trouble.

I must have been in a half-doze. And somehow a premonition was conveyed to my unconscious mind and I awoke. I suppose all of us who play and work in the air are always unconsciously prepared for crises. Before my eyes flickered open, I knew the ship wasn't riding right.

We had had a little engine trouble on the trip before that fatal one. And I thought that there must once more be trouble with the engine I was detailed to. I knew that if that were true, it would take two men to do the job. So I decided to join "Red" Coleman who was relieving me in the gondola. He was standing at the time on the ladder leading up to the ship from the gondola. I spoke to him from the keel.

He said: "The radiator has sprung a leak. I need some water. Go and get a bucket and get some water."

Just then the ship did some unusual manoeuvres. Very unusual. It nosed down at an angle of forty-seven degrees—maybe more. I had never before known it to do that, no matter how serious the weather conditions.

I remember we commented upon it. But we both thought that it would soon right itself. So we went right on pouring water into the radiator. About a minute later, we heard her crack—the ominous sound of brittle metal breaking.

We knew the situation was critical. And one of us—I don't know which—said, "Let's go down in the keel and drop gasoline tanks."

Rushing to Earth

We did that. But it didn't help. It didn't slow up the speed of the ship that was shooting toward earth with terrifying speed. It seemed to be going sixty miles a minute. But maybe the speed seemed exaggerated, because we knew that every second was rushing us to earth and death.

"Well, we're gone—"

I remember saying that to "Red." And he said, "Maybe not—maybe we'll get a chance to get out of here—"

It occurred to me to jump. But I thought the forward end of the ship would hit first and slow up the speed of our end. You can think pretty fast at such a time. And I finally decided to jump when we came nearer the earth. I thought I would get hurt but that I might escape alive.

You know they say you get all kinds of visions when you think you are going to die. Perhaps I'm not human—or something. But my sins didn't come before me. And I somehow didn't get excited. In fact, I don't think I felt much of anything. I might almost say that I was apathetic—indifferent. Perhaps, it was because I was so sure that we didn't have a chance. Perhaps that was why I decided that I might as well jump—dive to death alone—as crash with the others in the ship.

Dodges Sky Monster.

That is what I did. I jumped. And when I landed on a cliff alive, for the moment I felt only surprise. I rolled over and over. Then I picked myself up and saw the huge boat drifting in my direction. What good to have jumped and found solid earth beneath, and no bone broken—only to be crushed in the wreckage of the ship.

I had survived one leap. With instant decision I dove again, this time to the hill lying below the cliff. Over and over I rolled once more. I remember after the second dive I hesitated to pick myself up. I was sure I could not have escaped a second time without all sorts of fractures and injuries.

No Bones Broken.

Diffidently I tried first one limb then another. No hurt anywhere. Almost unbelievable. But I accepted the fact of life, as I had accepted that of death.

After all if you're going to get it you'll get it anywhere. Why, any of these days I might be walking along the street and something might run into me. That's why the Shenandoah disaster won't prevent me from continuing my work. I don't think it's any more dangerous up there than it is down here. A brick might fall on your head any day. And the brick might be a real one, or it might be any unforeseen catastrophe.

Just think of all the disasters that occur on land or on the ocean. Think of the Boston night club that caved in. Of the explosion of the boat at Newport. Of this and of that. It's no worse up there in the air. And it is so much more exciting.

MISSOURI NEWS LETTER

St. Louis, Oct. 2.—Alumni members of the Law School of the University of Missouri will give a luncheon here Saturday noon at the Hotel Statler, the final day of the annual meeting of the Missouri Bar Association.

Among the prominent men who have been invited to the luncheon are Dean J. P. McBaine of the University of Missouri Law School and Stratton D. Brooks, president of the university and members of the Board of Curators, who will be here attending the Missouri Bar meeting.

Columbia, Mo., Oct. 2.—Uniforms for any kind of weather will be taken to New Orleans, where the Missouri University Tigers meet Tulane University in an intersectional game.

In addition to the heavier uniforms regularly used in the Missouri Valley, light jerseys, as used in the California game last Christmas, will be taken by the team. A new set of rainy weather uniforms also will be taken along.

Coach Jack Crangle, who witnessed the Tulane-Louisiana College game, reports the southern weather as steaming as compared to that found here. The Tigers have been drilled by Crangle in the plays used by Tulane last Saturday and the varsity found little diffieulty in turning back the plunges and passes attempted by the second-string men.

St. Louis, Oct. 2.—"The nation never rises above or falls below the fireside," Dr. Henry A. Potter, pastor of the Third Baptist Church declares in advice to young men on "Choosing a Wife."

"The country is no better than its domestic life. The home is the foundation of the republic and anything that makes for its destruction makes for the destruction of the whole social order. What America needs, is a higher, a more sacred appreciation of the home.

"Of course love is the first essential to a true marriage. Unless a supreme affection exists, marriage cannot be entered into without doing violence to the law of God and to the deepest instincts of human nature.

"But love is more than mere sentiment or a passing fancy. True love is full of common sense. It is a matter of the mind as well as the heart. Marriage should be the result of thought as well as feeling. And so, in choosing a wife, there are three characteristics that I would invite every young man to look for.

"First, the wife of your choice should be a domestic girl. By this is meant that she should be a home-lover. Beware of the girl who seeks her chief pleasure outside her own home.

"By a 'domestic' girl is means also a homekeeper. The unpoetic art of housekeeping is a far more important factor in happiness than most people without experience realize. I am an ardent advocate of the higher education of women, but I maintain that in this work-day world, while it is good to graduate in psychology and philology and biology and the rest, it is more important for a girl to have a thorough course in bakeology and roastology and stitchology and darnology and other domestic ologies.

"The second characteristic that I would urge the young man to look for in the one to whom he is to give his heart and hand and name is that she be sympathetic. If a man comes home fagged and jaded because of a hard day's tussle with the world and is greeted with nothing but nagging and criticism, God help him! But if he finds at home one who understands and sympathizes, one who is ready to stand by him when things are not going well, he can face the world's frowns with a smile and can fight his battles with a light heart.

"Another characteristic that I would have the young man ask of the wife of his choice is that she be beautiful. Love of the beautiful is a part of all normal human nature. But there is a beauty finer and more lasting than that of form or feature, without which mere outward beauty is a mockery. It is this deeper and more real charm and loveliness that I would have you look for in her who is to be your wife."

Sturgeon, Mo., Oct. 2.—There is no substitute in lovemaking for the old Columbus buggy and a gentle horse, in the opinion of Omar D. Gray, publisher of the Sturgeon Leader.

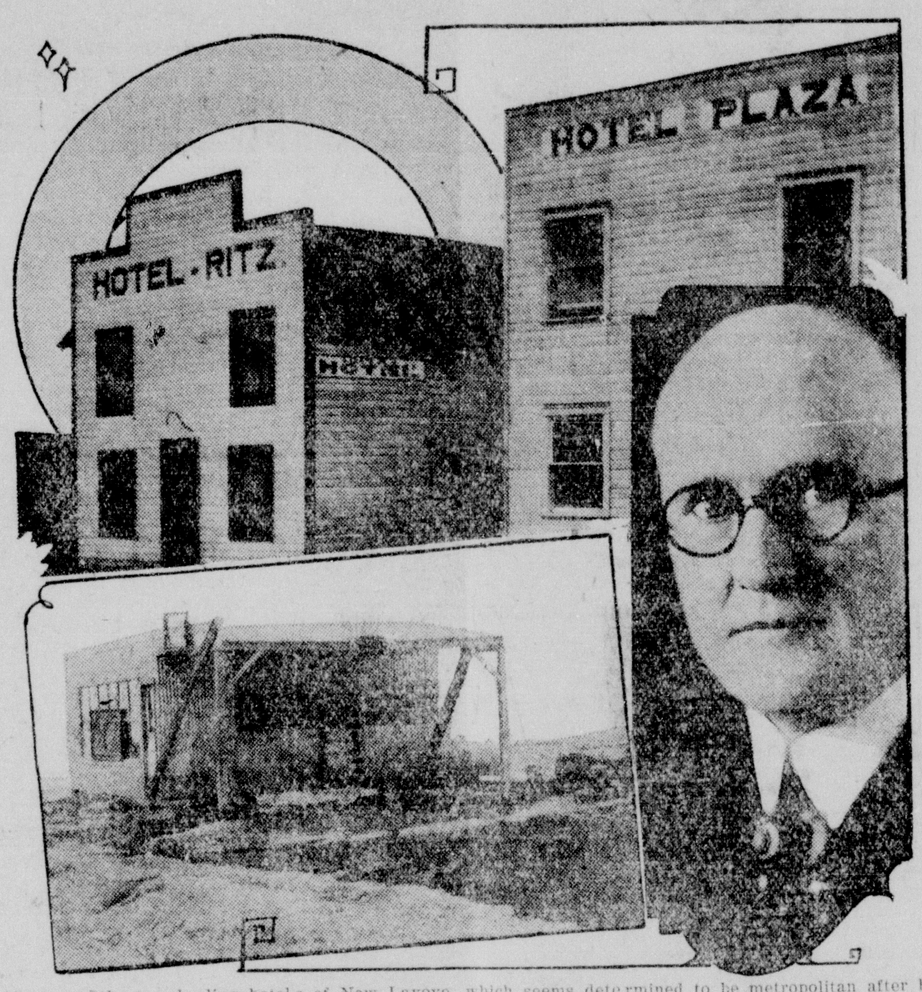
"I was asked which was the greater aid to lovemaking, the automobile or the porch swing," the editor said. "I was not a qualified witness, but if either of them can beat the old-time Columbus buggy with a good gentle horse and a drive through the country lanes with the little blue Johnny jump-ups in the fence corners and out in the woods the dogwood blossoms were sprinkling the forest with their snow white, with an occasional bob-white whistle coming from out of the cornfield—I say if the porch swing or the auto can beat such a combination—it's some aid, that's all."

Columbia, Mo., Oct. 2.—J. S. Hubbard, executive secretary of the Missouri Press Association, boasts a cherry tree now bearing its second crop of cherries.

While other trees are losing their foliage this one tree is just ripening its doubleheader crop. "What is gained in quantity is lost in quality, for even the birds won't touch this second crop of cherries," Mr. Hubbard said.

Mrs. W. B. McCormick, who was injured Wednesday afternoon when she stepped on a nail, is better today.

Town Wiped Off Map by Court Is Revived Three Miles Away



Above are the two leading hotels of New Lavoye, which seems determined to be metropolitan after having been moved three miles. Below are Judge T. Blake Kennedy and the last building on the old site.

Judge Made 1500 People Move—Townspeople Threaten Revolt.

Sheridan, Wyo., Oct. 2.—Just eight months ago the town of old Lavoye, Wyo., was doing a business of $3,000,000 a year. Property in the town was valued at $775,000.

Today there isn't as much as a shack to mark the spot where once the town of 1500 people stood.

In place of the hotels, stores and homes stand only tall grease-covered derricks. For it was "black gold" that literally forced Old Lavoye off the map.

A New Town.

Already three miles distant a new Lavoye has been built. Some of the buildings were moved there intact, others were torn down and rebuilt and some weren't worth moving.

The story is one of the most unusual arising out of the numerous battles for oil in the otherwise barren lands of the west.

For a time it was feared this dispute would cause armed warfare in the Wyoming oil fields.

In 1920, Joseph Lavoye, a French Canadian, applied for a homestead on the site of Old Lavoye, but never received the final patent to the land.

Then came a great oil boom in the rich Salt Creek field. The homestead was in the heart of the field.

Lavoye leased lots to build up stores and the town sprang up with the typical overnight rapidity of a trading center in the oil fields. Prices were high and Lavoye was getting rich fast.

All the geologists said great quantities of oil were underneath the townsite.

The tall oil derricks came closer and closer to the town. The Ohio Oil Company, which had the oil rights to surrounding oil lands, wanted to drill a well on the main corner of the town.

The townspeople objected and the company filed its suit to wipe out the entire town.

Lavoye fought it through the courts until his funds were exhausted. Then the townspeople took up the fight. Appeals were made to Washington without avail.

Finally Federal Judge T. Blake Kennedy, who decided Teapot Dome belonged to Harry Sinclair, decided that the townsite belonged to the oil company and ordered that it be vacated.

Revolt Was Feared.

The decision stirred the oil fields almost to the point of revolt, but the townspeople finally decided to abide by the decree.

The new town has been built almost as quickly as the old one, but it is much cleaner and more attractive than Old Lavoye. But there isn't a derrick in sight, and the ground on which the new town stands is as yet worth nothing compared to the riches which underlaid Old Lavoye.

Meanwhile, at Old Lavoye, "black gold" continues to come from the earth, but its founder is getting no share of the treasure.

The fight is over, but it has left bitter sores that may cause unrest in the oil fields for many years.

EDUCATION AND RELIGION

Comment on the Uniform International Sunday School Lesson for October 4, 1925.

Read Acts 17.

Wm. Southern, Jr.

One day in the summer of A. D. 49, a small boat sailed into the port of Piraeus. At the landing it discharged a single passenger, a small man of middle age who had the appearance of one who had never been in that section before. He looked about him as the boat, its errand accomplished, shoved out from shore, and inquired of a bystander the way to Athens. There were no taxis waiting, no street cars with jangling bells, no hotel runners eager for a tip. The native pointed toward a wide paved road and toward the distant spires of the city on the hill.

The stranger gathered his cloak about him and started walking along the highway. Presently he was absorbed in what he saw. He knew the history of this country. Not far away was the pass where the brave Greeks had immortalized themselves at Thermopylae and also there was the Plain of Marathon. Along the road were statues of heroes and of generals. The stranger was especially interested in the statues of gods the Greeks either worshipped or made fun of. Here he saw Jupiter, Mercury, Mars, Apollo, Minerva. He smiled when he saw the statues of Jupitor and Mercury for it had not been very long since he had been acclaimed as Mercury while his companion was declared to be Jupiter.

For a long time he stopped at a great figure and read the inscription thereon. It read "To An Unknown God."

The visitor was Paul and he had come to Athens after having been run out of Beroea. Athens was simply a meeting place set by him where his friends Timothy and Silas were presently to join him. But Paul could not be idle. The inscription "To An Unknown God" stirred him strongly. These people of Greece were people of education, people of bravery, Epicureans and Stoics, the boast of the philosophers and were without God, and it was his mission to bring God to them.

Paul had not been in Athens long until he was talking in the synagogues and on the street corners. Now this was just what Athenians loved. Dr. Luke in his story naively remarks, "All the Athenians and the strangers adjoining there spent their time in nothing else, but either to tell or to hear some new thing." They were happy when they could get up an argument. They were as eager for discussion as the populists of a few years ago. So it happened that Paul was welcome. Here was a man with a new doctrine, they would hear him and tear him to pieces. In Athens there was a place set apart for trying out new philosophers. It was the place where criminal trials were held and was on Mars Hill, possibly near the foot of the hill. The Parthenon was near. It was called the Areopagus.

Paul was accompanied by a choice lot of philosophers, men who had already been initiated and told to explain his doctrines. He took as his text the statue to an Unknown God and told them he came to make them acquainted with the true God.

Paul's speech on this occasion is a model of oratory. He always adapted his talk to the people to whom he was talking and these were educated people. His address seemed to have little effect but he did make two converts, one was Dionysius the Areopagite and the other "a woman named Damaris." I would like to have met these two afterward and I wish we had some record of their lives as Christians.

Approaching any large city in this country today Paul would find a nice paved road and many statues. On a prominent place he would probably find a memorial shaft erected in memory of the soldiers who died in the great war. In a park he would see a statute of some general on horseback, or further along he would instinctively take off his hat at the grave of a Lincoln. He would also see statues of some of our gods. Here would be a great, many-colored sign telling of an automobile tire of miraculous worth, our god of speed. Another sign would picture the beauties of some brand of chewing gum representing our god of money. Great factories would rear their smoky towers, the god of business. On the streets uniformed men carrying clubs and guns would lead his mind to the god of law, of broken laws. Nowhere would he see a statue announcing an Unknown God. Our gods are pretty well known.

Paul would find as he entered our modern City, beautiful churches, Christian churches all of them, although he would be puzzled probably to understand why there were so many kinds of Christian churches. He would enter and take his seat in a corner close to the pulpit and when a chance came to speak I wonder what he would have to say. No doubt in a fine city church he would wonder where were the poor, the badly dressed, those who live in the slums. He would not find them there.

He would, however, find plenty of philosophers and hair splitters ready and willing to argue with him about theology, baptism, evolution and the ten commandments. He would find rich men ready to pour out money they had gotten by whatever means, but would he find a Dionysius and a Damaris?

In a public meting a few days ago I heard a speaker say "We have too much education and not enough religion." I have been wondering ever since if this were true. In Athens Paul found the highest point in education, philosophy and oratory then known. He found a people whom we still accord the highest mental attainments, but he found no real religion. It is not among the uneducated and the ignorant that we find the doubters and the atheists. I have seen old negro preachers and old negro mammies who could not read and write who accepted the Christian religion and understood it far better than the intellectual giant who required every conclusion to be proven by known formulas. The wild tribes of darkest Africa all believe in God, nay they know there is a God and future life. They live close to God. It is only when we reach the temples of learning and move among the philosophers that we find the splitting hairs of argument.

Education and religion should go hand in hand and do. It is only when education is turned into a wrong direction that we find doubters. The men of history we know as the greatest of intellectuals are the simplest in their knowledge of God.

Does not this suggest that we need something in our schools and colleges? We profess to teach truth and science and philosophy. But we raise our hands in horror when it is suggested that we teach our children the greatest of truths, the most scientific of the sciences, the most vital of philosophies, the religion of Jesus Christ.

We need a Paul to march up to the cities and stand in the Areopagus.

Stab Man for Pint Whisky

Boston, October. 2.—Purchasing a pint on a physicians prescription is pretty nearly as precarious a process as transferring a payroll in this prohibition area.

John Oskall learned this to his sorrow as he stepped from a southend drug store with a bulging hip picket.

Three men held him up, stabbed him thrice in the left arm and escaped with a pint of whisky, which he had bought for medicinal purposes.

Bolshevism Stealthily Penetrating China

Manchurian Army If Supported Can Deal With Problem, Leader Tells American.

Mukden, Manchuria, Oct. 2.—Bolshevism is stealthily penetrating China, while foreigners seemingly are not yet awake to the menace, General Chang Tso Lin, Manchurian "war-lord" declared in an interview with Roy W. Howard of the Scripps-Howard newspapers, at his private palace here.

Discussing the forthcoming conference between China and the great powers, Chang Tso Lin declared that definite action by the conference by refusing customs and modernizing unilateral treaties was imperative. A deadlock, he declared, would furnish propaganda for the bolshevists.

"Moscow which threatened to attempt the overturn of European governments, is now directing its entire force toward China," the former bandit, Manchurian war chief said.

"Russia is anxious to see a deadlock and is pointing out that it successfully repudiated its old debts and treaties and it is preaching that it is possible for China to duplicate the Moscow formula. Consequently a deadlock would menace not only China but all governments.

"Inoculate more than 40,000,000 Chinese with Russia's political plague and no nation will be able successfully to quarantine it."

"To the suggestion that in America the influence of bolshevism as an important factor sometimes appeared somewhat dubious, Chang Tso Lin replied that while bolshevism normally is incompatible with Chinese psychology, some leaders are using it as an instrument and are receiving assistance from Moscow. Certain northern highways are closed for secret transportation of munitions from Russia, he said.

The Manchurian army, if properly supported, morally and financially can deal with the bolshevist problem, the Manchurian leader suggested.

and rebellion against present conditions there. This is largely the result of Christianity permeating the heart life and the mental life of that great people and arousing them from the stupor of the centuries. Involved in this condition, however, is a failure on the part of the Chinese students to distinguish between things definitely Christian and elements in western civilization, which are far from the standards of Christianity. Materialism of our age and military emphasis of western civilization which reached its tragedy in the World War, make it difficult for people who have recently come into contact with Christianity to understand why a religion so pure as that which is represented in the Gospel of Christ, is mixed up with movements of so serious a character.

Opportunity Ahead.

"Our missionaries in China are standing for reforms, aimed at while not sympathetic with some of the methods in vogue by the student class.

"The next move belongs to the nine powers which signed the agreement for the release of China from oppressive influences. The Board of Foreign Missions of the Methodist Episcopal Church is fully expecting President Coolidge and Secretary Kellogg to lead off in this matter in a very satisfactory way. When these national issues are settled the church will have a larger opportunity for service than it has ever had. The better class of the Chinese people are pleading with the missionaries to stand by with patience during this period of turmoil, even as the Christian church did during the Boxer rebellion."

Kirksville Freshmen Must Wear Caps Too

Special Assembly Held At State Teachers College There For Distribution Of Head Pieces.

(Kirksville Daily Express)

The "K" Club at the K. S. T. C. was called on this morning to administer medicine to the freshman class, which had been prescribed by the sophomore class.

A special assembly or mass meeting was called at the regular assembly time this morning for the purpose of distributing purple caps with white buttons to all freshmen. The meeting was presided over by Harry Baker, president of the Sophomores. The rules given by the Sophomores demand that all Freshmen wear their caps all the time, with the exception of Sundays and when they are out of town, until the day of the home-coming football game with the Warrensburg Teachers College October 30. They are required to tip their caps to all upper classmen, and must remain standing in assembly until they are recognized by the person presiding.

Millard Atteberry, the president of the Freshman class, was the first victim of the cap. He was called to the front, where he was presented. The "K" club then distributed caps to all the others, and a cry went up, "speech, Attebery." Attebery was again called to the front and requested to make his speech from the platform. With no preparation and in such an embarrasing situation, it would have been difficult for an expert speaker to make a good talk, but the Freshman president handled the situation in a fitting way and showed that the right spirit prevailed. President Farr also made a fitting talk for the occasion.

L. L. Donaldson and son of Barnard were Maryville visitors today.

GOOD HOPE.

Loren Gillespie's sale today went off nicely this being his third annual stock sale. The cows sold for $60 and $71, while the Spotted Poland-China hogs sold sky high. Carl Burk buying the bulk of the 140 head.

The Good Hope ladies aid lunched the Gillespie sale and did well considering the sale beginning at 1 p. m. The ladies took in over $28 at their counter.

Abe Miller is building a new corn crib and feeding room, cementing the floors.

U. A. Anderson is plastering the upstairs rooms of his home. These are fine days for such work.

Guy Blanchard bought a barrel of paint and has been applying it to his barn; suppose he will soon have everything painted up, spic-span.

Sowing wheat is the order of the day among those who haven't sown yet. Melvin Anderson drilling it today if he did get sprinkled.

Mr. and Mrs. Elmer Hutcherson moved to Hopkins last week, thereby making it nicer for their children to go to school, and Henry Holker has moved on the farm to look after things for Elmer.

The Farmers Union met last Thursday evening in the regular meeting and for the next meeting will have a little literary program preceding the debate, "Resolved, the Poultry Business Is more beneficial to the Farmers Than the Dairy Business."

Today when Mrs. Andy Morehouse was canning tomatoes her little son, Jimmie was playing near her and she twisted the top off of a jar of the hot tomatoes and they fell on his little head and shoulders, burning them and his neck quite badly. Dr. Maxwell was called and he said he didn't think it was serious. We certainly hope not. He is resting easy at this writing.

Another bad accident is that of Floyd Morehouse who was bitten by a mad dog Sunday morning. The dog died that night and Floyd is being treated for the trouble. We hear that this dog had a fight with a skunk some time ago and was bitten by the skunk and "they say" this will cause hydrophobia nearly every time. If this be true, it is worth our remembering and we should be on the guard all times of such. Floyd is feeling O. K. today and still at work.

Mrs. Sarah Taylor, son Charles and daughter, Mrs. Laura Morehouse are visiting friends and relatives in northwestern Nebraska. They stopped in Lincoln to visit a few days as they went out. Mr. Lilly is being cook and chore boy in the Taylor home during their absence.

Gene and Joe Clymens and wife attended the Stickleman sale last week and Joe bought six Jersey cows. He evidently is going into the dairy business.

John Hay and wife, who live in Wyoming surprised their folks the first of the week by coming in for a short visit.

Order Now Is to Arrange Funeral Long in Advance

Chicago, Oct. 2.—The Undertakers have undertaken the task of convincing the American public that the thing to do is to order your funeral early, save money and avoid the rush.

Harry G. Samson, of Pittsburg outlined the plan today in an address before the convention of the National Selected Morticians.

"Business men in increasing numbers are consulting morticians about their funerals the same as they engage lawyers to make out their wills," Samson said. "The new tendency is business logic combined with the thoughtfulness for one's survivors. Under the stress of a death in the family too elaborate funerals are often held.

Closing Grain Review

Chicago, Oct. 2.—Grain futures worked to a mixed close in today's session on the Board of Trade. Wheat dropped sharply and closed unchanged. Corn held fractional gains while oats were unchanged.

Profit taking took early gains from wheat. The market opened strong with indications of doing befter. On the top, longs took advantage and reduced while taking profits.

Considerable buying of nearby corn helped hold the market most of the time.

Oats had a strong undertone and moved along within the smallest fractional range.

Provisions advanced following the early drop on commission house covering.

MARYVILLE IN EARLY LEAD

SCORES TOUCHDOWN IN FIRST QUARTER AGAINST ALBANY.

KISSINGER LUGS BALL

About 500 Persons Attend Opening Game—Both Teams Fumble Ball at Start of the Game.

Bulletin.

The final score was 19 to 0 in favor of the Maryville high school.

With a line composed of almost entirely new men and with a backfield lighter than any of previous years, the Spoofhound football team of 1925 took the field this afternoon against the highly touted Albany football eleven.

In the line W. H. Herbert, coach of the Maryville High School team placed Alsup, Hall, Nichols, Tindall, New, Caudell and Godsey. Godsey and New being the only veterans. Cockayne, Smith, Bratcher and Kissinger composed the backfield.

The game was played before a crowd estimated at 500 persons. The Maryville team was suited up in black jerseys with large white numerals. Last year's suits were green.

Albany started the game in action by kicking off to the Maryville team. Slow forming interference prevented Maryville from returning the ball any distance. Upon the second play of the game Maryville backfield men fumbled and Albany gained possession. An exchange of punts resulted in Albany fumbling the catch on their forty yard line. Both teams fumbled the ball and did not work together smoothly. This is due to the fact that it is the first game of the season for both teams.

The line-up at the start of the game was as follows:

Maryville	Position	Albany
Alsup	le	Thompson
Hall	lt	Davis
Nichols	lg	McCrary
Tindall	c	Sheldon
New	rg	Spainhower
Caudell	rt	Todd
Godsey	re	Lainhart
Cockayne	qb	Dills
Smith	lhb	Whittington
Bratcher	lhb	Redmon
Kissinger	fb	Fee

Officials: Gharrett, Drake, referee; Deatherage, umpire; Pierpoint, S. T. C., headlinesman; Bert Raines, timekeeper.

The two teams soon settled down to consistent football. The Maryville team out-punted Albany, an exchange of kicks bringing the ball to the 35 yard line. Line bucks and off-tackle smashes brought the ball to within two yards of the goal line for the Maryville team. "Red" Kissinger, heavy hitting backfield man on the Maryville team lugged the oval across the center of the line for the first tally of the game. The ball was brought out to the ten yard line and Kissinger failed in his attempt to kick goal.

The quarter ended with the ball near the center of the field. Maryville made three first downs during the quarter, while the Albany team failed to carry the ball for first and tens. Three substitutions were made: Strong for Smith, "Fox" Kissinger for Caudell, and Bair for Spairhawer on the Albany team.

Albany assumed the offensive in the second quarter and began a series of end runs and forward passes that netted her two first downs. At one time the Albany team became a dangerous threat, the ball being carried to the 4-yard line, but the Maryville team braced and held the Albany eleven for downs. In this quarter the Maryville team proved weak on punting and resorted to straight line bucks against the Albany team. The half ended with the ball in the center of the field.

32 BEARCATS TO HIGHLAND

IS FIRST GAME OF SEASON FOR N. W. TEACHERS.

TAKES ENTIRE SQUAD

BULLETIN.

The Maryville State Teachers College football team scored in the first half, the half ending 6 to 0 in favor of the Bearcats. The Maryville team was playing the Highland, Kan., team at Highland.

Thirty-two Bearcats, a bit nervous because of this being the day of their first game of the grid season but nevertheless determined to fight as only Bearcats can fight, set forth at 7 o'clock this morning for Highland, Kan., where they will meet the Highland College team. Coaches Lawrence and Jones, anxious to see every man under fire, took the entire squad on the trip.

It is no bear story when it is said that Coach Lawrence predicts a tough game for the Bearcats. Highland had a world of green material last year, and this year with an all-valley man as coach, they are expected to have great driving power. The coach of the Highland team this year is a former player on the Kansas Aggie team and was the sensation of the valley during his last year in school.

The line-up that will start has not been announced although it will be a good guess that Coach Lawrence will not use his strongest lineup the entire game. In signal practice last night the following line-up was used:

Search at quarterback.

Willoughby and Masters at halfbacks.

Eads at full back.

Grahain at center.

Hamilton and Fouts at guards.

Moentman and S. England at tackles.

Berst and Cox at ends.

As secondary strength O'Banion, Vanderslice, are capable of filling positions in the backfield with Joy, Barklay, Hollar, Lewis, Westfall and Hartman as strong substitutes in the line.

The following men made the trip:

Moentman, Burks, Lewis, Graham, Masters, Hamilton, Eads, Hartman, Vanderslice, Joy, Miller, O'Banion, Hilsenbeck, Smith, Search, Stitt, Cochrane, Hedges, H. England, Reith, Berst, Wilson, Barklay, Stone, Cox, Westfall, Hollar, Fouts, Willoughby, Sam England, Mulleanax and Chick.

Gossip Wags Tongue About Mrs. Wilson

Widow of Late President Neither Confirms Nor Denies Engagement.

Paris, Oct. 2.—A possible romance in which the names of Mrs. Woodrow Wilson and Dr. Sterling Ruffin of Washington have been linked together has been the subject of much speculation in Geneva and Paris the last few weeks.

Mrs. Wilson now is being entertained by her friends here, but Dr. Ruffin was a passenger on the steamer Majestic, which sailed for New York September 23.

Rumors of the impending engagement of Dr. Ruffin and Mrs. Wilson brought from a close companion of the latter this statement:

"Mrs. Wilson refuses to confirm or deny reports concerning her.

"Mrs. Wilson intends to conserve the position of private citizen and she has maintained it her entire stay abroad, even in Geneva, when she was the object of attention by League of Nations officials and Swiss civic and other bodies. She has nothing to say regarding her future plans or prospects."

Mrs. Edith Bolling Galt, widow of Norman Galt, was married to Woodrow Wilson, then President, December 18, 1915.

Dr. Sterling Ruffin is a professor of medicine in George Washington university and physician-in-chief of the university hospital, and consulting physician for several government hospitals. He is 59 years old and a Democrat.
